

The Window

Kiah Haysom
Shelley Haysom-Brown

Short Abstract

Attending university can be seen as the window to the adult world. I wrote these words as part of a university assignment. Living with Cerebral Palsy has been different. Doctors called me disabled and nurses put bandaids on but my body, my brain, my eyes are special and allow me to communicate. To complete my Tertiary Preparation Program I used my AAC tools of my PODD book and eye gaze device as well as innovative word banks of more academic language. I have a great future ahead. Sometimes it has been confusing and frustrating but now I am proud and am getting to do the things that make me happy and make me, me.

Long Abstract

Attending university can be seen as the window to the adult world. I wrote these words as part of a university assignment. Living with Cerebral Palsy has been different. Doctors called me disabled and nurses put bandaids on but my body, my brain, my eyes are special and allow me to communicate. To complete my Tertiary Preparation Program I used my AAC tools of my PODD book and eye gaze device as well as innovative word banks of more academic language. I did my assessments a quarter at a time accessing content with a screen reader with the help of mum, my brother and support workers. Moving into my new course next year could be a mixture of uncomfortable and nice. I am a strong, smart, capable woman. I have a great future ahead. Sometimes it has been confusing and frustrating but now I am proud and am getting to do the things that make me happy and make me, me.